We fell in love with Spanish wine by wandering the Galician coast, exploring ancient Andalusian bodegas, and picking Spanish thyme in Garnacha fields in Priorat. While we strongly suggest you go on these adventures also, simply drinking these wines may render expensive international travel unnecessary. The story of Spain is all here—from lively, exciting, and new to historic, complex, and brooding, these wines encompass the soulful Spanish exuberance for simply enjoying good food, good drink, and good company.

Espumoso | SPARKLING

‘SALUD!’

Often designated a “wedding wine,” Cava commonly doesn’t receive half of the respect it deserves. The majority of Spanish bubbly hails from Catalunya, and specifically Penedès (the selection below is from here unless stated otherwise). It is made with lesser-known grapes like Macabeu, Xarel-lo, and Parellada. Think great Cava can’t hold a candle to Champagne? We’re out to prove they do.

Pais Vasco 'CHALK-OH-LEE'

Just hearing the word “Txakoli” evokes thoughts of hot days, cold wine, and sweet, briny oysters. This crisp, lightly sparkling wine from the Northern coast of Spain is as easy to drink as it is difficult to spell, and best consumed young. Don't worry about the names of the grapes; only the Basque can actually pronounce them.

Castilla y Leon TORRID SUMMERS, COOL NIGHTS

Normally associated with red wines, the sprawling central region of Castilla y Leon is home to 9 Designaciones de Origen (DOs), including Toro, Rueda, Bierzo, and Ribera del Duero. The best white wines here come from the aromatic Verdejo and the terroir-driven Godello.

Catalunya UN POCO DE TODO

Located in the Northeastern corner of Spain near the French border, Catalonia terrain encompasses both warm Mediterranean coast and cool Pyrenees slopes. Not surprisingly then, the wines here are extremely varied; think of cool cava, rich Priorat, and everything in between. Wineries here are also experimenting with international varietals; Riesling from Spain? Riquísimo!

Galicia 'GREEN SPAIN'

With Portugal to the south and over 1,000 miles of coastline, the landscape of Galicia is marked by shallow fjords, rolling hills, and lush forests. Due to the region's relative poverty and isolation from the rest of Spain, its exceptional wines only began gaining international recognition in the 1990s. Since then, the popularity of Galician wines has skyrocketed, and rightfully so. The mainly cool, damp climate and stony soils produce both stunning, lively whites and aromatic, graceful tintos. Albariño, the most popular white wine from Rias Baixas in Galicia has been sited as the 'best seafood wine in the world.' We don't disagree.

Rioja EL CONOCIDO

The first evidence of winemaking dates back to 873 in what is probably the most well-known wine region of Spain. Though Rioja is better known for earthy, oaked red wines, Viura (known as Macabeo in Catalonia) is the most important white varietal here.

Castilla y León 'TINTO DEL PAIS'

Hardly known internationally until the 1980s, Ribera del Duero is often cited as Spain's leading red wine producing region next to Rioja. Tempranillo is king here, and all wines listed below are largely comprised of Spain's noble grape. It is named for Spanish "temprano" as it ripens several weeks earlier than other Spanish varietals.

La Rioja EL REY

Tempranillo is nowhere more at home than in Rioja, one of only two DOCs in Spain. It is the main grape of many of the wines listed here. Riojas have traditionally been characterized by their use of oak, and are still classified according to the amount of time spent in barrel; however, many winemakers are experimenting with leaner, elegant styles for the international market.

Las Islas

The Canaries aren't the only Spanish wine-producing islands untouched by Phyloxera. However, mostly known for beaches and tourism, Mallorca has only one bodega for every 65 restaurants. By cultivating indigenous varietals and using traditional winemaking techniques, Mallorcan and Canary Island winemakers alike are beginning to showcase their 'alternative' wines on the mainstream stage.
